FACT SHEET: Self harming and suicidal behaviour

Self-harm, suicide threats and gestures by a child may put the child at risk of significant harm, and should always be taken seriously. Professionals should also consider the circumstances of a serious eating disorder or extreme risk-taking as a threat or attempt at self-harm or suicide by a child. Professionals in all agencies who become aware, through disclosure or otherwise, that a child has self-harmed or threatened or attempted suicide, should discuss this with their line manager and their agency's nominated Safeguarding Children advisor.

For further details see the full procedure at: www.northumberland.gov.uk/SafeguardingChildren

Times of vulnerability

Children can be particularly vulnerable at times of transition, when any emotional difficulties they may be experiencing are compounded by changes which they may find stressful or frightening such as:

- Leaving home or care,
- Transferring to adult services,
- Facing or being in custody,
- Experiencing a family break-up
- In the context of a bereavement
- Preparing for exams

Professionals may be able to reduce or prevent self-harming behaviours by planning for transitional support for children already receiving care services, and being alert to children becoming stressed and isolated in universal settings such as schools.

Action to be taken

Professionals in all agencies who become aware, through disclosure or otherwise, that a child has self-harmed or threatened or attempted suicide, should discuss this with their line manager and their agency's nominated Safeguarding Children advisor.

Whenever a child is known to have deliberately harmed themselves, a parent should be contacted urgently unless to do so would put the child at risk of significant harm. If the injury warrants further medical assessment, the parent, or if they are unavailable, a responsible adult should accompany the child to an Accident and Emergency department for treatment and an assessment of the child's needs and the risk of further harm.

Children under 16 years

If hospital admission is required, children under 16 should be admitted to a children's ward under the care of a paediatrician. Irrespective of whether the child requires physical monitoring or treatment, s/he should receive the necessary assessment of mental health need and risk, together with support, from Children & Young Peoples Services (CYPS).

Referrals to Children’s Social Care

Hospital staff should undertake a full assessment and if there are any child protection concerns they should consult with the nominated/designated Safeguarding advisor and / or make a referral to Northumberland Children’s Social Care.

Children’s Social Care should always allocate cases involving the attempted suicide of a child to an experienced social work practitioner who has completed relevant training in this field and who is well acquainted with this pathway

Discharge from hospital

Any discharge from hospital should involve co-ordinated planning with community health services, CYPS, Northumberland Children’s Social Care, the education setting and the police where appropriate. Every child or young person should have a Discharge Plan in place to set out the pathway of care.

Prevention & Early Intervention

- Professionals and organisations (including schools and educational settings) can contribute to reducing the risk of children and young people resorting to self-harming and suicidal thoughts and action. They can do this by providing and emotional literate, supportive environment in which children and young people are encouraged to explore and understand their emotions, develop resilience and positive coping strategies for life.

- Universal services can/should continue to be a source of significant support for children and young people with self-harming and or suicidal intent/behavior even when other targeted and specialist agencies, such as children’s social care and the Children and Young Peoples Service (CYPS) are involved.

Keeping Children and Young People Safe from Harm, Abuse and Neglect

Who is this document for?

It is primarily for use by front line staff working with:

- young people who identify themselves as using self-harm as a coping strategy;
- young people when they require access to specialist Children & Young Peoples Service (CYPS) as a result of disclosing self-harm, suicide ideation and/or attempted suicide
- Children and young people of whom adults are aware that have considered or engaged in suicidal behaviour or ideation

Principles underpinning this procedure

- Safeguarding the child or young person is of paramount importance
- Recognising self-harm as a real and sensitive issue
- Each young person to be treated as an individual
- Ensure the implementation of equal opportunities
- Young people to be made aware of the local Confidentiality & Information Sharing policy
- To work towards minimising harm and give coping strategies where appropriate
- Recognising the young person may be part of a family unit
- Support to be offered to families
- Where staff feel intervention is necessary, this will be achieved through ongoing communication with the young person

The Aims of this procedure

- To ensure the child or young person is kept safe
- To improve the quality of support, advice and guidance offered to young people who self-harm, or maybe at risk of attempting and or completing suicide.
- Offer consistent support to children and young people no matter what point of contact, to standardise the response of agencies regardless of what type of agency.
- To increase knowledge, skills and competence of staff to recognize and respond appropriately when working with a young person who self-harms, and/or knows of someone who self-harms.
- To meet a locally identified need by service providers & commissioners.

Definitions to support this procedure

Suicide
Suicide is an intentional, self-inflicted, life-threatening act resulting in death from a number of means.

Suicidal intent
This is indicated by evidence of premeditation (such as saving up tablets), taking care to avoid discovery, failing to alert potential helpers, carrying out final acts (such as writing a will) and choosing a violent or aggressive means of deliberate self harm allowing little chance of survival.

Self-harm
Self-harm describes a wide range of things that people do to themselves in a deliberate and usually hidden way. In the vast majority of cases self-harm remains a secretive behaviour that can go on for a long time without being discovered. Self-harm can involve:

- Cutting, often to the arms using razor blades, or broken glass
- Burning using cigarettes or caustic agents
- Punching and Bruising
- Inserting or swallowing objects
- Head banging
• Hair pulling
• Restrictive or binge eating
• Overdosing
(Mental Health Foundation 2006)

Self-injury is any act which involves deliberately inflicting pain and/or injury to one’s own body, but without suicidal intent.

The term self-harm is often used as an all encompassing term referring to suicidal ideation and attempted suicide.

The Risk Assessment Process

First Contact – Baseline Risk Assessment Stage
A child, a peer or a parent may directly contact a member of staff. Equally a worker may notice a change in the child’s behaviour or appearance that leads to a cause for concern. Either way, an early baseline assessment should take place to ensure that the child or young person gets timely and appropriate support.

All key contacts need to feel confident to make an early baseline assessment via a number of basic but important questions – See below – risk factors outlined on page 6 should be considered when completing baseline risk assessment.

At this stage it is strongly recommended that the professional should ask the young person who else is aware of the young person’s circumstances or has been involved to avoid risk assessment duplication.

Responses to the risk assessment questions together with an assessment of the appearance and behaviour of the child or young person will lead to some or all of the following:

- Referral to children’s social care for initiation of child protection procedures
- An increased awareness of the child’s or young person’s needs and an on-going support and potential re-assessment system being put in place locally, or
- A recognised need for the child or young person to be referred on for a more in-depth assessment and support.

Looked After Children - if a child /young person is Looked after then The Looked After Health Team should also be notified if a child has self harmed (though this should not replace contact with Mental Health services and should be in addition to notification of child’s social worker)

Consent Issues

If a young person is deemed to need support from other professionals the worker supporting the individual will:
Keeping Children and Young People Safe from Harm, Abuse and Neglect

- Seek consent from the young person to share information
- Tell the young person what information will be shared, why it should be shared and the consequences of sharing

It is highly recommended to seek consent where possible, however, If there are concerns about harm then a referral should be made with or without consent.

Child Protection

After the baseline risk assessment, or at any stage of this care pathway, if a professional is concerned that the child is in need of protection, the usual child protection procedure should be followed whereby a section 47 enquiry / core assessment will be carried out by Children’s Social Care in consultation with the police and other agencies. Children’s Social Care should always allocate cases involving the attempted suicide of a child to an experienced social work practitioner who has completed relevant training in this field and who is well acquainted with this pathway.

Further Risk Assessment Stage

At the Further Risk Assessment stage a number of key workers will be in a position to offer a more in-depth risk assessment and thus determine whether the child or young person needs further support. Assessment at this stage using the proforma below will lead to one of the following outcomes:

Low risk – An increased awareness of the child’s or young person’s needs but no further action

Moderate risk – An increased awareness of the child’s or young person’s needs and an on-going support and potential re-assessment system being put in place

High risk – Identification of a high risk of need leading to either emergency admission or referral to any of those stipulated in the Referral Routes box within the pathway diagram.

This staged risk assessment approach ensures that practitioners are supported where uncertainty arises, and that children and young people receive timely and appropriate support and assessment.

Child Protection

At any stage, if a professional is concerned that the child is in need of protection, the usual child protection procedure should be followed whereby a section 47 enquiry / core assessment will be carried out by Children’s Social Services in consultation with the police and other agencies. Children’s Social Care should always allocate cases involving the attempted suicide of a child to an experienced social work practitioner who has completed relevant training in this field and who is well acquainted with this pathway.

Further Assessment of Risk to determine referral

Second level questioning:

Please remember that risk factors are not, nor can they ever be, tools for prediction. Also, any risk assessment can only be valid for the moment at which it is carried out and so may need to be repeated at suitable intervals according to professional judgement or advice. Risk of self-harm is not the same as risk of mental illness, and one does not need to be mentally ill to self-harm, although there may be links (see below). Bear in mind that some information can be obtained from the young person, but not all, which may need to come from other sources, such as parents or carers, peers, or other professionals. The order of the factors in the list is not necessarily significant, as they are all worthy of consideration.
Risk factors:
- Previous deliberate self-harm or suicide attempt.
- Intent – does the young person wish to die? What do they understand by death? Do they think that what they have done, or are planning to do, will kill them? N.B. it is the young person’s perception of or belief in potential lethality that is important here, not what a professional thinks.
- Evidence of mental illness, especially depression, psychosis or eating disorder.
- Poor problem-solving skills – are problems seen as over-whelming? Does the young person see themselves as capable of solving, or coping with, problems? Have they been able to solve problems in the past? May be linked to poor communication skills.
- Impulsivity/planning - Were steps taken to avoid discovery? Were any preparations for death made? A tendency to impulsive behaviour may increase risk of repetition and thus the likelihood of significant harm, but evidence of planning may indicate higher levels of seriousness for any given attempt. But remember that an impulsive act can be just as damaging as a planned one.
- Substance use (especially important in impulsive males).
- Hopelessness – is there a future, or any reason to continue living? What plans for the future does the young person have? This has been described as “the missing link” between depression and suicide. It can be especially significant if there has been previous deliberate self-harm or attempts at suicide.
- Anger/hostility/anti-social behaviour – some research suggests conduct disorder may be a higher risk factor than depression. This may be difficult to assess, as information will be needed from sources other than the young person.
- Family factors – instability (this can mean more than divorce or separation and can include repeated house moves). History of suicide or mental illness, especially in first-degree relatives. History of substance use. Arguments or disputes can be important.
- History of abuse, whether physical, emotional or sexual, but especially the latter.
- Loss or bereavement – this may include such things as loss of status as well as deaths. Anniversaries of losses can be significant.
- Bullying or other victimisation, such as experiencing racial or sexual discrimination, and including homophobic bullying (see below).
- Issues of gender or sexual orientation – a very high proportion of young people who either are homosexual or think they might be self-harm or attempt suicide.
- Current stressors or life events.

Other considerations:
- Function of deliberate self-harm (other than a clear suicide attempt) – what did the young person hope the act would achieve: a sense of relief or release; punishment; purification; a desire to feel physical rather than emotional pain; a form of communication of distress or other significant matter; something else?
- Method of self-harm – be aware of unintended consequences, such as liver damage from repeated ‘Paracetamol’ overdoses, stomach ulceration from aspirin overdose, brain damage from oxygen starvation in attempted hanging, drowning or exhaust poisoning, or bone damage resulting from jumping.
- Time of year may be significant, especially when school-related factors are involved, such as bullying or exams. Hence the start of terms or exam periods may see an increase in self-harming behaviour.
- Young people may be highly ambivalent in their views of themselves and any act of self-harm.

Levels of risk and suggested action:

Low risk:
- Suicidal thoughts are fleeting and soon dismissed
- No plan
- Few or no signs of depression
- No signs of psychosis
• Superficial harm
• Current situation felt to be painful but bearable.

Action:
• Ease distress as far as possible. Consider what may be done to resolve difficulties
• Link to other sources of support
• Make use of line management or supervision to discuss particular cases and concerns
• Review and reassess at agreed intervals.
• Consider completing a CAF
• Consider safety of young person, including possible discussion with parents/carers or other significant figures

Moderate risk:
• Suicidal thoughts are frequent but still fleeting
• No specific plan or immediate intent
• Evidence of current mental disorder, especially depression or psychosis
• Significant drug or alcohol use
• Situation felt to be painful, but no immediate crisis
• Previous, especially recent, suicide attempt
• Current self-harm

Action:
• Ease distress as far as possible. Consider what may be done to resolve difficulties
• Consider safety of young person, including possible discussion with parents/carers or other significant figures
• Seek specialist advice
• Possible mental health assessment – discussion with, for example primary mental health worker, CYPS or G.P.
• Consider consent issues for the above
• Consider increasing levels of support/professional input
• Review and reassess at agreed intervals – likely to be quicker than if risk is low.
• Consideration of child protection processes

High risk:
• Frequent suicidal thoughts, which are not easily dismissed
• Specific plans with access to potentially lethal means
• Evidence of current mental illness
• Significant drug or alcohol use
• Situation felt to be causing unbearable pain or distress
• Increasing self-harm, either frequency, potential lethality or both.

Action:
• Ease distress as far as possible. Consider what may be done to resolve difficulties
• Safety – discussion with parents/carers or other significant figures more likely
• CYPS referral
• Consider consent issues
• Consider increasing levels of support/professional input in the mean time
• Monitor in light of level of CYPS involvement.
• Referral to children’s social care for child protection procedures

N.B. at any time during assessment and review emergency medical treatment may be found to be necessary or child protection concerns may be raised.
Direct referral route to Specialist or Emergency Care

Some practitioners at the ‘Baseline Risk Assessment Stage’ might decide to directly refer to the professionals in the ‘referral route’ box. For example, a General Practitioner may refer directly to the Children and Young Peoples Service.

It is also possible that the first time any community health or education professionals learn of a child or young person in need may be after attempted suicide or deliberate self-harm that has resulted in assessment in Accident and Emergency or admission to hospital. Where a child/young person’s has been deemed to need an assessment it is essential that we do not lose sight of that person post assessment.

A referral to Children’s Services for every child and young person who attends A&E will enable an informed assessment of risk and vulnerability to be offered. Children’s Services will be able to assess any previous or ongoing involvement with the child or family, ensuring that available information is considered within the context of the child’s attendance at A&E. Children’s Services will then determine if the child/family require additional support from themselves.

If a child or young person presents at A&E with issues relating to alcohol and or substance misuse, a referral to SORTED must also be made. A&E will share the Children’s Services referral with SORTED (as stated in the ‘Northumberland Care Pathway for children presenting at A&E with issues relating to alcohol and or substance misuse’)

CAF or other multi-agency planning processes may also be implemented to support the child/young person.

On-going support systems need to be put in place irrespective of the level of risk based on the notion that the level of perceived risk could change at any time.

Ongoing support may take many forms and may be offered via numerous sources and will be dependent on the child or young person’s needs and wishes.

Where the baseline assessment does not lead to referral for more in depth assessment it is essential that communication with the young person remains strong and that an appointed professional remains in contact with the young person on a regular basis.

If a young person has been admitted to hospital the Children and Young Peoples Service might continue to offer support, but equally the school nurse, the child’s GP, or in some cases the child’s social worker, may be best placed to offer ongoing support. One key worker should be named and identified to offer an ongoing point of contact for that child, with an alternative person stipulated should the key worker not be available. This needs to be agreed locally between key professionals and in consultation with the family and young person. A planning meeting may need to be convened for this purpose, and further review meetings where requires.

It is also acknowledged that parents / carers, staff and other pupils may require support themselves when supporting young people at risk of self harm. Key contact numbers for staff are available within Appendix 4.

Appendix 2 – Relevant Legislation

1. Children Act 1989 Section 17

A child is defined as ‘in need’ by Section 17 of the Children Act (1989) if:

- he or she is unlikely to achieve or maintain, or to have the opportunity of achieving or maintaining, a reasonable standard of health or development without the provision for him/her of services or
- his/her health or development is likely to be significantly impaired, or further impaired, without the provision for him/her of such services or
- s/he is disabled.

2. Children Act 1989 Section 47

Where a local authority has reasonable cause to suspect that a child who lives, or is found, in their area is suffering, or is likely to suffer, significant harm, the authority shall make, or cause to be made, such enquiries as they consider necessary to enable them to decide whether they should take any action to safeguard or promote the child’s welfare.

‘Harm’ is defined as ill treatment, which includes sexual abuse, physical abuse and forms of ill-treatment which are not physical, for example:

- emotional abuse or
- impairment of health (physical or mental) or
- impairment of development (physical, intellectual, emotional, social or behavioural)

This may include seeing or hearing the ill treatment of another (s120 Adoption and Children Act 2002).

3. Mental Health Act 1983

The Mental Health Act 1983 is the principal Act governing the treatment of people with mental health problems in England and Wales. The Mental Health Act covers all aspects of compulsory admission and subsequent treatment. Besides these emergency procedures, there are other sections of the Act under which a person can be detained in hospital without their consent. (In November 1999 the Government issued a White Paper called 'Reforming the Mental Health Act', which was intended to act as the basis for a new Act. In June 2002 this was superseded by a draft Mental Health Bill).

The Mental Health Act of 1983 covers the detention of people deemed a risk to themselves or others. It covers four categories of mental illness: severe mental impairment, mental impairment, psychopathic disorder and mental illness.

The first two are generally interpreted as people with learning difficulties who have aggressive tendencies. Psychopathic disorder relates to people who have a "persistent disorder or disability of the mind" which leads to aggression.

Mental illness itself is not defined by the Act. However, it does state what it does not cover, which includes people who may be deemed to be mentally ill "by reason only of promiscuity or other immoral conduct, sexual deviancy or dependence on alcohol or drugs".

The Act allows people considered to be mentally ill to be detained in hospital and given treatment against their will. They do not have to commit a crime or have harmed anyone. They are usually detained because it is considered in their interests and for their own safety, but they may be held because they are deemed a risk to others.
