Ian Lavery

Member of Parliament for Blyth and Ashington

As the member of Parliament for Blyth and Ashington I want to see every community in my constituency thrive. As a former miner and trade union official I am keen to see initiatives that deliver for ordinary people in our communities and particularly those that give young people the best opportunities. Blyth like the rest of the constituency was built upon heavy industry and has suffered as that declined. The town is well placed to play a major role in the green industrial revolution and can have a bright future in that area if we harness the talents of local people.
