

Background

Bringing back passenger services on the railway line between Ashington and Newcastle (The Northumberland Line) is a key priority of Northumberland County Council and the North of Tyne Combined Authority.

Improving transport links from towns such as Ashington and Blyth is of key importance to encouraging more sustainable access to the main economic centres across Tyne and Wear. Enhancements to transport links within South East Northumberland will also be instrumental in stimulating economic investment within the region and will help to bring forward much needed housing.

This is a hugely exciting project and we want to get your views on what we have done so far and how the project develops going forward.
